

Dogs deserve a holiday too!

Do you know what your dog is doing while you're enjoying yourself overseas?

As a nation we are renowned for our love of animals and so it's not surprising that many dog owners feel uncomfortable at the thought of jetting off and leaving their best friend behind, especially if kennels or house-sitting is not for them. Part of the relaxation of being on holiday is the peace of mind that everything you've left behind is safe and sound, including your extended four-legged family. You're actually more likely to travel if you know your pet is going to be looked after by a family member or a professional pet carer. It's for this reason that the Thomas Cook Group has teamed up with Barking Mad as its preferred 'doggy travel agent'. Barking Mad is the UK's leading 'home from home' pet care service, accommodating dogs with local host families, ensuring they are in a caring environment that is similar to their own home and that their routine is kept as consistent as possible. Owners even receive a pet postcard and holiday snaps from their dog to share in the experience with them. Thousands of customers nationwide have already been delighted with the service Barking Mad provides – the perfect holiday solution for you, and your four-legged friend.
